Assignment of Copyright and Publication Agreement for a Contribution to Modern Believing

Please read and make sure you understand the notes on page 2 before signing this form

TITLE OF ARTICLE:

AUTHOR(S):

ISSUE:

For jointly authored articles, each author must sign a Copyright and Publication Agreement.

DECLARATION

I/we*:

(i) assign the present and future copyright in this article, throughout the world, in any form (including print-on-paper, electronic and digital forms), and in any language, to Liverpool University Press

(ii) agree that Liverpool University Press may seek payment of fees from incorporated or unincorporated bodies or from individuals in return for permission to make copies of the article from the conventional printed form of Modern Believing, from the online form or from articles stored electronically, e.g. by document-delivery services or internet libraries

(iii) agree to indemnify Liverpool University Press in respect of any claim that may be made against it by third parties for infringement of copyright related to publication of the article, or concerning the authorship of the article or rights to publish the article

(iv) warrant that the paper does not, to the best of my/our* knowledge, contain anything that is libellous, defamatory or obscene, and that it has not been published elsewhere

(v) agree that Liverpool University Press has the right to make such editorial changes it deems necessary, but that any substantial alteration will not be made without consultation and agreement with the author(s)

(vi) agree that I/we* will not deposit this paper in a post-print form (i.e. final draft post refereeing) in an open access repository (institutional or otherwise) without permission from Liverpool University Press

(vii) agree that this paper cannot be deposited in the open access repository without first observing a 24 month embargo, and noting that Liverpool University Press' version/PDF version cannot be used. The open access repository (as referenced in vi) must be non-commercial and on a non-profit server

I/we* assert our moral rights as defined in the UK to be identified as the Author(s) of the article.

LIVERPOOL UNIVERSITY PRESS

Journals Publishing Agreement

Statement of Policy

1. In common with most serials and journals publishers, Liverpool University Press asks you to assign to it the copyright of articles, book reviews and other contributions accepted for publication in its journals. We do this for these reasons:

- (i) control of copyright by the publisher helps to ensure maximum international protection against infringement of copyright, libel or plagiarism;
- (ii) it enables us to deal more efficiently than would otherwise be the case with requests to reproduce or reprint a journal contribution, or part of it, and to operate in accordance with a policy which is sensitive to relevant changes in international copyright law, to differences in copyright law in many countries, and to the desirability of encouraging the dissemination of knowledge.

2. Two moral rights were conferred on authors by the UK Copyright Act in 1988. In the UK an Author's 'right of paternity', the right to be properly credited whenever the work is published (or performed or broadcast), requires that this right is asserted in writing.

3. In assigning your copyright you are not forfeiting your proprietary rights, including patent rights. Nothing in your signature to this Assignment of Copyright shall restrict your rights as the author(s) to revise, adapt, prepare derivative works, present orally or otherwise make use of the contents of the article, provided that these do not conflict with the financial interests of Liverpool University Press. You may use your material after obtaining our permission, which will in usual circumstances be freely given. Liverpool University Press espouses the charitable purposes of its parent body and exists to encourage and disseminate scholarship. Permission to use the contents of your work elsewhere will not, therefore, normally be withheld provided that Modern Believing is acknowledged as the original source with a full bibliographical reference. When we grant permission to a third party to reproduce your contribution (or any part of it) in another print or electronic publication, we shall share equally with the author(s) any fees received for permission to reproduce work when the total fee is greater than UK£ 100.

4. The policy of Liverpool University Press on reproduction of papers by their own authors is that authors retain the right to reproduce their own articles for their own purposes, provided that no sale is involved, and to reprint their articles in any volume of which they are editor or author. Subject to normal acknowledgement of the source of first publication, permission will not be withheld from the publisher of such a volume.

5. Liverpool University Press participates in a number of photocopying and digitization licensing schemes throughout the world, including those offering centralized licensing arrangements and fee collection. Income received through these arrangements is applied to further the development of Liverpool University Press and its purpose of publishing scholarly work.

6. In addition to publication of your article in the conventionally printed edition of Modern Believing, your assignment of copyright confirms your agreement to its electronic (including online) publication and/or storage. Liverpool University Press may also arrange to include your article in electronic document-delivery services and databases, whether managed by itself or by third parties, without further consultation.

7. By signing this form you certify that:

- (i) your contribution is your original work and that it has not been published before
- (ii) you have obtained permission for and acknowledged the source of excerpts from other copyright works; the relevant permission correspondence should be attached to this form. If you are in doubt about whether or not permission is required, please contact Liverpool University Press, as failure to obtain such permission could be an infringement of copyright and, in some circumstances, lead to litigation
- (iii) to the best of your knowledge the paper contains no statements that are libellous, unlawful or in any way actionable in law
- (iv) you indemnify Liverpool University Press in respect of claims made against it by third parties for copyright infringement relating to publication of your article, or concerning the authorship of the article or rights to publish the article
- (v) you agree to the terms and conditions relating to open access repositories as referenced on the previous page (points vi and vii)
